

To No. 189

Decision of all missionaries of the South Australian Mission regarding the raising of the necessary sums to meet their personal needs; discussed in Adelaide, South Australia, on July 5, 1843.

That, since Brother Teichelmann, following the remittance from the Society dated December 3, 1842, and received by the "Davidson", amounting to £100 Sterling (One Hundred Pounds Sterling), the news contained in the letters arrived with the "Elisabeth Burkham" that Mr. G. F. Angas does not seem to have responded to the Society's request to draw on his firm for the missionary's needs, and has reservations about the Society's power of attorney to draw on said firm for the missionaries' personal needs, and to continue to exercise it; it is the brothers' unanimous decision that Brother Teichelmann should draw on said firm for the said purpose as long as no other instructions or directives from the Committee in Dresden have arrived.

Furthermore, all contributions in the colony, which are not specifically intended by the donor, should be used to meet the personal needs of the missionaries, thereby reducing the amount of money remitted by the society for this purpose.
